Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 14-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Coulter et al. Coulter et al. discloses Fig. 9, a force retention plate 20 comprising a generally flat elongated plate 50/26 having at each opposite end a pair of perpendicularly extending laterally spaced anchor members 24 which can be detachably engaged to a stake abutting associated form members. The anchor members 24 are integrally connected to said generally flat elongated plate. The anchor members are integrally connected to said generally flat elongated plate by integral reentrant portions, (see Fig.10, for example), that provide arcuate recesses detachably engageable to stabilize the position of said generally flat elongated plate.

Claims 14-16, 19, and 20, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Peden. Peden discloses Figs. 1 and 2, a force retention plate comprising a generally flat elongated plate 12 having at each opposite end a pair of perpendicularly extending laterally spaced anchor members 20 which can be detachably engaged to a stake abutting associated form members. The anchor members 20 are integrally connected to said generally flat elongated plate. The anchor members are integrally connected to said generally flat elongated plate by integral reentrant portions, (see Fig. 2), that provide arcuate recesses detachably engageable to stabilize the position of said generally flat elongated plate. Laterally spaced pair of elongated stakes 14 have a multiplicity of through-bores extending diametrically therethrough at spaced intervals. Nails 22 extend through corresponding through-bores of the spaced pair of stakes to provide projecting end portions on opposite sides of the stakes with retention plate 12 extending transversely between a pair of laterally spaced elongated stakes 14 and detachably engaging the projecting end portions of the nails on opposite sides of the stakes to restrain the stakes against a force tending to separate them.

Claims 17 and 18 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Claims 1-13 are allowed.
